MYSTERY OF THE DJINN

Mary Sutherland

The first Creation of God were the Angels made from the air, the second creation was the Djinn made from the smokeless flame and the third creation was Man made from water and clay.

The bible makes mention of them in the story of Solomon and the building of the temple. Djinn can be good, evil, or neutrally benevolent and hence have free will like humans and unlike angels.

Genie in English is derived from Latin genius, meant a sort of tutelary or guardian spirit thought to be assigned to each person at their birth. They are usually invisible to humans, but humans do appear clearly to jinn, as they can possess them. Jinn have the power to travel large distances at extreme speeds and are thought to live in remote areas

Given Free Will, the djinn were asked from god to give obedience to Man, his third creation. The Djinn Shaytan (known by the Christian as Satan) and a third of his followers refused to bow to man. Angered, God cast him and his followers out of the heavenly realm and banished them into the earth....thus comes the biblical story of 'angels' being cast down from heaven and becoming the 'fallen angels'.

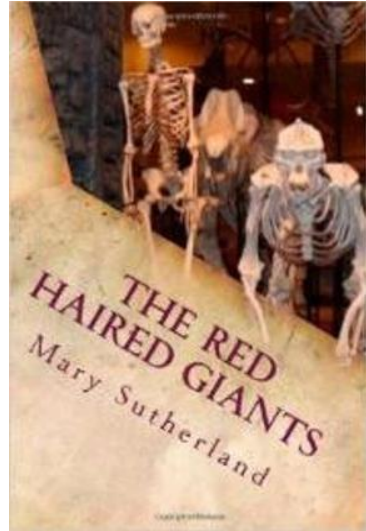

This is an inaccuracy or a contradiction to the biblical story, telling us that angels were not given 'free will', but was created to obey all gods' commandments and worship him. It was only the djinn and mankind who were created with 'free will'... so it only makes sense that if this is true, then the fallen 'angels' were not angels at all but 'djinn', god's second creation cast out for disobedience. Thus they fell from god's grace.

According to the Koran, the Djinn found the women of earth beautiful and impregnated them from which the red haired giants were born.

theories, photos and stories about the mysterious Djinn.*

Even today red haired children are called 'Djin-jurs'....or (Gin)gers. The story of the birth of giants in the Koran is very similar to Genesis which tells the same story but uses 'fallen angels' as the name instead of Djinn.

The word Jinn (Djinn) is an Arabic word meaning “to hide” or “hidden”. The Jinn are hidden from our sight and are considered to be spiritual beings similar to angels and even demons. The Jinn are mentioned mainly in Islam but also have some links to Christianity, regarding King Solomon and the building of the temple.

In Arabian lore, djinn are a race of supernaturally empowered beings that have the ability to intervene in the affairs of people. Like the Greek daimones, djinn are self-propagating and can be either good or evil. They can be conjured in magical rites to perform various tasks and services. A Djinni (singular) appears as a wish-granting “genie” in folk tales such as in The Book of 1001 Nights collection of folk tales.

In Western lore djinn are sometimes equated with demons, but they are not the same. They are often portrayed as having a demonic-like appearance, but they can also appear in beautiful, seductive forms. The djinn are masterful shape-shifters, and their favored forms are snakes and black dogs. They also can masquerade as anything: humans, animals, ghosts, cryptids, and other entities such as extraterrestrials, demons, shadow people, fairies, angels and more.

Fire Djinn manifesting as a ‘feathered serpent

The djinn are not confined to the Middle East, or to the past. They exist in their own realm, probably a parallel dimension, and have the ability – and the desire – to enter our world and interact with us. The djinn have been among us in antiquity and they are among us now.

According to another story, Solomon summoned the djinn to his crystal-paved palace, where they sat at tables made of iron. (In folklore, iron weakens supernatural entities.) The Qur'an tells how the king made them work at building palaces, making carpets, and creating ponds, statues and gardens. Whenever Solomon wanted to travel to faraway places, the djinn carried him on their backs. American troops camped with Jordanian troops for training exercises in Jordan at Baten el Ghou, which means "Belly of the Beast."

The Jordanians considered it a haunted valley, where the demons came out at night to murder people. It was not unusual to have one's sleep interrupted by the screams and howls of frightened Jordanian soldiers who swore in the light of day that they had seen a demon...Baten en Ghou was a desolate and jagged valley carved out of the desert that spilled over from Saudi Arabia. It was renowned for its spiders.

David Morehouse, a retired remote viewer for the U.S. military, relates in his book Psychic Warrior how a head injury enabled him to have temporary visions of djinn, normally invisible to most people. Morehouse was accidentally shot in the helmet, which left a huge lump on his head. After this, he temporarily experienced seeing the elusive djinn.

He described the conditions as: Sometime in the night, my eyes opened to a surreal light outside the tent. It was like the light of an eclipsed sun and wasn't coming from any stove. It filled the night sky. The entire Baten en Ghou and the hills beyond were bathed in the strange bluish gray light; I walked to the edge of the bluff and stared into the valley. Dark figures moved effortlessly across its floor, like apparitions. They poured from the rocks in various heaps and shapes and moved about the clusters of tents. I could hear muffled cries from the Jordanian encampment, and momentarily I thought we were being overrun by thieves or Israelis. Panicked, I turned to run for help.

Colliding with one of the figures, I reflexively closed my eyes, except I didn't collide. I walked right through it. Turning around I watched the

Jinn were on the earth before man, but it is unknown for how long. By some accounts, they were created 2000 years before Adam and Eve, and were equal to angels in stature.

When Allah created Adam, he told the angels to bow to him. The angels complied but Iblis, the leader of the djinn who also had access to heaven, refused, and so he and his kind were cast out of paradise. Iblis appealed to Allah, and the djinn were granted the opportunity to redeem themselves by Judgment Day. I believe that it is in this story that we learn of the fallen angels.

Djinn encounters occur everywhere and they may be interpreted as other entities rather than their true selves. This is especially the case in areas where little is known about them. Encounters with angels, fairies, demons, elementals, extraterrestrials, mysterious creatures and ghosts of the dead may be djinn in disguise, either playing tricks or carrying out an agenda.

Fire and Smoke

In 'The Book of Enoch' I found passages that support my theory of the Djinn being what we biblically refer to as the Fallen Angels.

To tangle the web even more, the Fallen Angels (Djinn) were also given the name "The Watchers", Chapter 7 1 It happened after the sons of men had multiplied in those days that daughters were born to them, elegant and beautiful.

2 And when the ANGELS (3) the sons of heaven, beheld them, they became enamored of them, saying to each other, Come, let us select for ourselves wives from the progeny of men, and let us beget children.

(MARY'S NOTE: An Aramaic text reads "Watchers" here (J.T. Milik, Aramaic Fragments of Qumran Cave 4 [Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1976], p. 167). Biblically they were referred to as angels; the Aramaic fragments reference them as WATCHERS.)

In the following we find Samyaza being referred to as the leader of the angels that rebelled against god. If you read any books on Djinn you will realize that this same Samyaza is named as the LEADER OF THE DJINN. Samyaza was later known in the Christian bible as Satan.

The following explains the Djinns Rebellion against God and their Fall from Grace.

3 Then their leader Samyaza said to them; I fear that you may perhaps be indisposed to the performance of this enterprise;

4 And that I alone shall suffer for so grievous a crime.

5 But they answered him and said; We all swear;

6 And bind ourselves by mutual execration, that we will not change our intention, but execute our projected undertaking.

7 Then they swore all together, and all bound themselves by mutual execrations. Their whole number was two hundred, who descended upon *Ardis, which is the top of mount Armon. *Upon Ardis...or "in the days of Jared" (R.H. Charles, ed. and trans., The Book of Enoch [Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1893], p. 63).

10 Then they took wives, each choosing for himself; whom they began to approach, and with whom they cohabited; teaching them sorcery, incantations, and the dividing of roots and trees.

11 And the women conceiving brought forth giants,

Greek manuscript adds to this section, "And they [the women] bore to them [the Watchers] three races—first, the great giants. The giants brought forth [some say "slew"] the Naphelim, and the Naphelim brought forth [or "slew"] the Elioud. And they existed, increasing in power according to their greatness." See the account in the Book of Jubilees.

12 Whose stature was each three hundred cubits. These devoured all which the labor of men produced; until it became impossible to feed them;

13 When they turned themselves against men, in order to devour them;

14 And began to injure birds, beasts, reptiles, and fishes, to eat their flesh one after another,

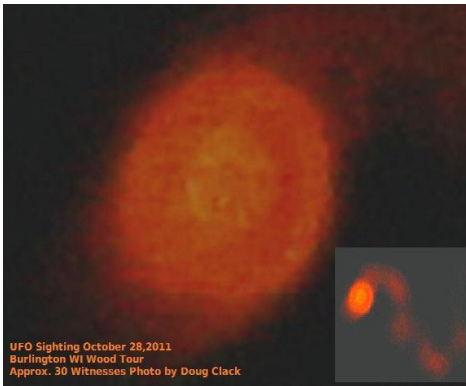

(8) and to drink their blood. (8) Their flesh one after another. Or, "one another's flesh." R.H. Charles notes that this phrase may refer to the destruction of one class of giants by another (Charles, p. 65).

The Greek texts vary considerably from the Ethiopic text here. One

THE DJINN IN UFO RESEARCH

Aside from reasoning that other conscious beings must exist in this seemingly infinite universe, and that many have the capacity to visit Earth, we should avoid assumptions about the nature of extraterrestrials.

However, we can and should examine the likelihood that deceptive entities known as Djinn have been masquerading as them.

PLASMA UFO Captured on Camera over the woods of Burlington
Wisconsin by Doug Clack

John Keel called them
"Ultraterrestrials".

Meade Layne knew them as "Etherians".

Gordon Creighton introduced them to the western world with the ancient and well-known name of "Djinn".

They've also been known as spirits, poltergeists, aliens and elementals.

It is important to know about them. It is absolutely essential to rule them out whenever considering the possible existence and/or presence of extraterrestrials. Why? Because they are the world's greatest tricksters and their ET charade may be the World's Greatest Hoax. They have thoroughly contaminated our thinking about extraterrestrials. Some among them pretend to be the embodiments of our science fiction fantasies. Some among them are good, while others are really demonic. The most powerful we call genii, origin for the word genius.

The Djinn concept offers a comprehensive and logical approach to looking at UFO's, cryptozoology, apparitions, magic, demons, monsters and many other mysteries. It is revelant for exposing much of the simple minded games and satanic mischief which have baffled and misled us throughout history.

Plasma UFO photographed by Mary Sutherland over Pine Street, Burlington Wisconsin

Ignorance and prejudice have prevented the western world from realizing what the wisdom of Islamic culture has to say about these beings. It reads like a textbook description of the UFO phenomenon. It reveals the true nature of new age channeling, poltergeists, spoon bending and other tricks, and so much more.

Gordon Creighton has enlightened us with a brilliant essay which deserves serious attention: "A Brief Account of the True Nature of the "UFO Entities". Gordon Creighton, served as a British Intelligence officer, and his familiarity with oriental culture enabled him to recognize the connection between Djinn and UFOs.

The Djinn are real entities living on this earth which are normally invisible to us. Their bodies are likely composed of what has been described as etheric matter. They don't live in bottles or adhere to the fairy tales told about them. Human beings are extremely susceptible to the fabrications of the Djinn. We believe what they want us to, because their impressive materializations and deceptions are tailored to fit our fantasies and belief systems.

Their comparative mastery of etheric forces bewilders and impresses us, and has always put us at a severe disadvantage in dealing with them, (plus the fact that we can't usually see them!).

The more skilled among them have therefore always seemed to us to be gods and wizards. Now in modern times they've become the "aliens from a technologically advanced civilization".

They are usually deceptive in their relationships with us. They are movers behind the UFO mystery as well as many other mysteries. Every culture shows the deep and massive imprints of their influence in our religions and mythologies.

Among all the theories presented to account for the presence of alien beings such as: (1) Intergalactic travel, (2) Travel from the future, (3) Travel from the Inner Earth, and (4) Archetypal projections from the Collective Unconscious, very little consideration is given to the concept that some of them simply exist on the earth in a way that isn't generally perceptible to us.

We continue to assume that we can perceive everything that is "real" with our 5 senses despite all the evidence to the contrary. An overzealous belief in a science and philosophy of materialism has probably resulted in an irrational amount of faith in our physical senses.

Studying and/or experiencing these Djinn enables a person to accept their existence. Once it is realized that unseen beings exist, it is fascinating to contemplate that there are likely to be inhabitants on other planets who are as hidden to us as the Djinn are! So much life is crammed into a single cubic inch of backyard soil that it is unlikely that the potential inherent in a whole planet is just wasted.

An egocentric, gotta-have-it-all-on-my-terms and see-it-with-my-bare-eyes mindset has probably been the biggest impediment to advances in scientific knowledge.

Before the invention of the microscope, science denied the existence of microbes. Even though we can't see radio waves we know they exist. Now we should realize that we aren't likely to find life on other planets as long as we insist that it must be just like OUR life and apparent to OUR 5 senses.

The Jinn concept challenges us to realize how limited our perceptions are. Things really don't work quite the way we think they do. Life is an ever deepening mystery! Most of us aren't comfortable with making that a part of our working hypothesis, but our explorations will be enriched and strengthened if we do.

They are real and they are here!
Possible Djinn sent to me from one of our followers.

Also known as worry vine, porterweed and verbena, it is used traditionally as a blood cleanser, for fever and as a nervous system sedative, and all parts of the plant are traditionally used, roots and leaves for brewing alcoholic drinks, leaves and flowering tops as medicine; the purple flowers even taste like mushrooms!

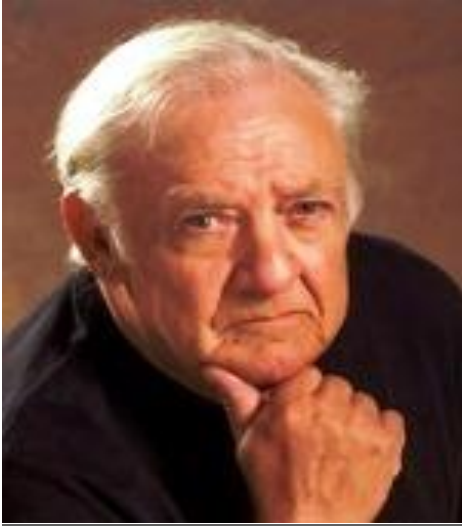

Parting of the Red Sea Fact or Fiction? Mary Sutherland

THE PARTING OF THE RED SEA and MOSES may have been "off-world" technology. In my book, Giants Gods and Lost Races, I show two separate accounts of a piece held in the hands that had the ability to separate the sea and then pull it back on itself again. The Mormons called it the 'Prime Directive'.

The "Su-Dasa's Battle Hymn of Victory" over the Ten Confederate Kings begins with "Indra" splitting the flooded Parushni River (Euphrates) allowing Su-Dasa and his people to cross. Indra then drowned the enemy with the returning waters. This is strikingly similar to the account of God of Moses parting the Red Sea. However both events could have happened when it comes to the parting of the sea. While going through my notes for this book, I found a file I had that may shed a new possible light on the "Parting of the Sea"

Written in 1554, the Guatemalan Titulo de Totonicapán documents the arrival of the U Mamae (ancients). According to their history, the U Mamae came from the other part of the sea and claimed to have been descendants of Abraham and Jacob. When they left, the great father Nacxit gave the chief a present of which Nacxit called "Giron-Gagal". According to their accounts, "When they arrived at the edge of the sea, the first leader Balam-Quitze touched the 'sacred director' with his staff and at once a passageway opened and then closed up again."

Beltain marks the end of the winter season and the start of the summer season. Beltane and Samhain, known as the Celtic Equinoxes are 6 months apart and not to be confused with our own Equinoxes of March 21 and September 21

Seasons and Moon phases are important in all religious Events,

Easter is on the First Sunday after the first full moon after the Vernal Equinox.

Beltain is the cross quarter day between The Actual vernal equinox and the summer solstice

While Samhain is in between the Autumnal Equinox and the Winter solstice

The Beltaine Fire is sometimes known as Easter Fires

BONFIRES: Bones of animals and family members are burned in a "Bone-Fire" along with the nine sacred woods and scattered throughout the fields thus adding nutrients to the soil and as a form of pleading to the Gods for a good planting and abundant harvest. People from all the local villages attend to meet and exchange news and pleasantries, but mainly to jump through the Bone-Fire to insure vitality, fertility and sexual potency.

The Maypole is erected (phallic symbol) and dancers having chosen partners, will end up having sex in the field which further adds the life force to insure a good crop. The term "Bone-Fire" has , over the years, been bastardized to "Bon-Fire".

Ever wonder why we feel so relaxed and peaceful while gazing into the dancing flames of a Bon-Fire while enjoying the company of good friends and companions.

The Pentagram and the Cross

I was Always interested in "stuff" that was out of the norm, I hate to use the word Occult because that dredges up all kinds of misinformation regarding supernatural phenomenon

Occult just means "Hidden Knowledge" nothing more, nothing less. So If I was to state, I am a practitioner of occult sciences, the average person conjures up all kinds of thoughts of Black magic. Satanism, necromancy and witchcraft.

I like to study hidden knowledge or that information that is not normally available. My religion is basically alchemy which is all about transformation... No, not lead into gold, but thought in to higher forms of consciousness although turning lead into gold would be great especially in todays market.

So while in my teens, I started to study Alchemy and Ritual Magic, please note that ritual magic, high magic, ceremonial magic, are all the same and are known as the Universal Science,

There is no black magic per Se: , only bastardizations of good practical magic, it is very intense,spiritual and I believe the first religion.

It requires mediation,visualization and a lot of time. but mainly it requires a belief that you are never alone, you are always with God, because with out God nothing will work. and without God we become "Shades" roaming the Earth without soul or conscious.

Most of everyone's knowledge of any Arcane Science comes from the writers of novels and Hollywood screen plays.

Two commonly used symbols or sigals are the "Pentagram" and the "Cross"

The Pentagram is probably the oldest symbols, reputed to be drawn By God and given to The Angel Raphel with instructions to be given to Solomon, who used the power of the glyph to control the Djinn for the construction of his temple that would ultimately hold the Arc of Covenant.

Now enter Solomonic magic or Western magic,

With the Apex up we have High Magic (attracting) with the apex down we have lower magic (banishing) or the glyph used for witchcraft High magic is done with the waxing moon, while lower magic is done with the waning moon.

There are 5 "Books of Moses in the Bible. 6th and 7th Books of Moses that containing all of Moses magical formuli

These two books were thrown out by Constantine in the 300's AD. He felt that this knowledge should not be at the disposal of the Layman – although some have reported seeing copies of these two books being now sold on Amazon.com . These missing books are the basis or starting point for all Occult sciences.

The Cross, and the sign of the Cross was used in ritual magic long before the birth of Christ . 4 points signify the four directions and elements.

Just as it is with the Pentagram, inverted, it becomes a symbol of Satanists, Devil worshipers and practitioners of Black Magic.

St. Francis and the Wolf

This story takes place in the small city of Gubbio in the North East section of Umbria Italy around the year 1220, at which time Gubbio was plagued by attacks from a giant wolf.

The terror started when a very large fierce wolf appeared and began attacking livestock. When the villagers tried to track it down the wolf retaliated by killing them.. After a period of time The Wolf cease to attack the livestock and would only attack and dine on humans. it got so terrifying that the villagers were afraid to traverse beyond the Village gates..

They formed hunt groups but Try as they might they had no weapons that could kill it

Now Enter Saint Francis who heard of their plight and came forth to help

They pointed the way to the Wolf's Den. When St Francis walked towards the lair the villages stayed back at a safe distance but still close enough to witness and help if need be.

St. Francis approached and called forth the wolf who immediately charged him, showing his full size and being. With fangs bared, frothing at the mouth the wolf moved in to attack. Watching this, the villagers shrieked and cowered in terror; not knowing what to do.

St Francis calmly stood his ground, raised his hand and made the sign of the cross. The Wolf promptly dropped to lay down at Francis's feet and whimper like a puppy. St Francis made another motion and the wolf followed him back to the village. With all the villagers there to witness this miracle, he said aloud for all to hear... "This is our brother wolf who will no longer harm you and he told the wolf that he also must heed this new edict and the the villagers must supply food for the wolf."

After this, the villagers and the wolf lived together until the wolf died several years later.

The villagers were so distraught they held a large funeral and buried him outside the gates. They eventually built a church there and called it The Church of St. Francis of the Peace.

While renovations were being done on the Church in the late 1800's workmen found the skeleton of a large wolf which was later reburied inside...

I Wonder if this site is still there..

The British Isles are awash with all sorts of legends and strange history, which have woven their way into the indigenous cultures and popular culture. Over the years, Eric L Fitch has written extensively about them for a variety of publications and in his previous title In Search of Herne the Hunter (With Capall Bann Publishing).

This collection brings together these writings, ranging in subject matter from the links between the Celtic god Nodens, a Roman temple, and J R R Tolkien; Woden's influence in England; various horned gods; the Montem mound and associated salt ritual; St Ursula; various witches; Norse gods; the Chalvey Stabmonk; folklore surrounding ravens, ghosts and goblins; King Arthur; exorcism; M R James; H G Wells and other authors; and a significant update on his earlier work on Herne the Hunter.

Eric L Fitch displays a phenomenal knowledge of folklore, legends, and custom. This is a collection that no folklore or antiquarian aficionado can do without.

Where The Devil Baby Dwells - Hull House

800 South Halsted Street
Chicago, Illinois

Rick Hale

The Hull House

In the latter decades of the 19th century, the city of Chicago saw a major influx of immigration. Hundreds of thousands of people from across Europe came to Chicago in the hopes of attaining the American dream. The greater majority of these immigrants were attracted to Chicago's heavy industry. Without their hard, back breaking work Chicago would not be the city it is today.

Immigrant Children

Sadly, these immigrants were mostly peasants and farmers and weren't always treated with the dignity and respect they deserved. The neighborhoods they populated were often slums where hunger, disease and crime ran rampant. Their existence was grim and their suffering overlooked.

Thankfully, there was one woman who sought to help as much as she could. Although coming from a wealthy family, Jane Addams, went to work and not only did she establish Hull House on the near South side. She unwittingly founded one of Chicago's greatest mysteries.

Jane Addams

Jane Addams, was born in 1860 in Cedarville, Illinois, a rural community in Stephenson County. As a child, Jane had dreams of doing something useful with her life, specifically helping the poor and sick. Her heart for the disadvantaged came after reading Dickens and his portrayal of 19th century London. Jane's mother, a caring and empathic woman was a constant source of inspiration for the future social reformer as well.

After school, Jane, decided that she wanted to be a doctor and attended medical school at the University of Pennsylvania. Unfortunately, health problems and a nervous breakdown caused the young woman to drop out of college. She considered this to be her greatest failure and traveled to Europe where her desire to help the poor was reinvigorated.

While in England, Addams and her companions, visited Toynbee Hall, a settlement house in London. Jane was awestruck with how the seemingly disparate cultures all worked together towards a common goal. This inspired her to do the same in a city she knew needed it the most... Chicago.

In 1889, Addams and Ellen Gates Starr, co-founded Hull House, a settlement house on the near South side of Chicago. The house was built in 1856 by Charles Hull, and required major repairs and renovations if it was going to be any good. With the help of several other socially conscious Chicagoans, Addams turned the old mansion into a stalwart defender of social change and justice.

During its time, Hull House, offered several programs that had a positive effect on the lives of the people it served. The house offered education for adults, a library, an art gallery and various other programs. Jane Addams, was a champion of the poor immigrants who came to her door seeking help. And with these immigrants came their old world religion and superstitions.

In 1913, rumors began circulating throughout the community, Jane Addams was sheltering a most unusual child. Not just any child, but something from the very pits of hell. For a number of days, Hull House was besieged by countless people demanding to see the devil baby Addams was harboring. Addams and her colleagues did everything they could to dispel the bizarre rumor. But, the people would have none of it. They were convinced the devil himself was in their midst. If so, how did the great social reformer come to be in possession of something so diabolical?

According to the legend of the Hull House devil baby, there are several stories detailing how the baby came to be Jane Addams' care. There are two stories that are the most commonly accepted origin stories of the demonic baby. And both are heavily influenced by old world religious beliefs and superstitions. Two very powerful forces that guided the lives of these humble folk.

The first story, tells of a devout Catholic woman who was married to a man who didn't share in her faith.

Her husband was a staunch atheist and didn't want to have anything to do with religion. To him, religious faith was a thing that belonged in the dark ages and it wasn't permitted in his house.

One day, the woman defied her husband's diatribes on religion and hung a picture of the Virgin Mary in a spare bedroom. When her husband discovered it, he flew into a violent rage and declared, he would rather have the devil himself than look at that picture.

Nine months later, the devout woman gave birth to an abomination. The child was born with hooves, razor sharp claws and pointed ears. When she beheld her child, she fainted and died shortly thereafter. The atheist husband bundled up the nightmare and dropped it on the doorstep of Hull House.

The second most commonly accepted story, concerns a man who was blessed with six daughters. Unfortunately, he didn't see that as a blessing but rather a curse. When his wife got pregnant for a seventh time, he cursed the child in her womb by saying, he would rather be father to the devil than have another girl. And like the previous story, his wife gave birth to a demonic baby. If you take anything from these stories it's probably, be careful what you wish for.

It would be simple to just say, a woman gave birth to a deformed baby that required special attention and abandoned it. But, the tale of the devil baby doesn't just end with its birth. So much more is involved.

Apparently, Jane Addams knew the evil she had on her hands and attempted to have the child baptized. She hoped that by doing so, whatever evil was in this baby would go away. She was horribly mistaken. When the priest approached the baby with holy water, the baby escaped Addams' grasp and went skipping through the pews while blaspheming God. When he was captured, he was taken back to Hull House and locked away in the attic. That doesn't keep the devil down.

Today, Hull House is a protected historic property and sits on the campus of the University of Illinois at Chicago. It's also a museum and part of the College of Architecture and Art. The house is open to the public and daily tours are given. Although old world superstitions are a thing of the past, reports of the attic being haunted by the devil baby persists to this day. And he isn't alone in haunting Hull House.

Visitors and staff at Hull House have reported the unnerving sound of a crying child coming from the attic. People have further claimed to see a monstrous vision with horns and red skin peering out from the windows of the attic. Sounds of diabolical laughter has also been heard when the house is empty.

A second ghost believed to haunt Hull House, is the wife of Charles Hull, the man who built the house. Addams herself, witnessed the ghost in a bedroom of the house and appeared to be amused by it. Others have seen the white lady of Hull House as well. When the room was used as a dressing room, the female actors reported the white lady appearing and vanishing.

Over the years ghostly phenomena not attributed to the devil baby and Mrs Hull has been experienced. Ghostly monks have been seen on the stairs and disembodied voices are heard regularly in the house.

Chicago's Hull House, is an integral part of Chicago's history with immigration. Jane Addams and Hull House played an important role in social reform at a time when immigrants were treated like animals. Whether you believe in the story of the devil baby is entirely up to you. But if you should visit, be respectful of the home, and spirits, that helped make this city great.

Something Strange In The Skies Over Chicago Chicago Mothman Sightings

Rick Hale

Illustration of the Chicago Mothman

Ever since mankind could look to the skies and behold the wonders of the heavens, strange things we couldn't quite wrap our minds around Or ascertain has been seen.

Looking back, we know that ancient man regarded the twinkling lights that adorn the night skies as long dead ancestors watching them from on high. Or the sun and the moon were gods engaged in an endless game of celestial tag. We, of course, know these ancestors and gods are the stars and the moon and sun, but other more mysterious things have been seen. Specifically beings that look like humans but could somehow fly.

Winged Humanoids: Old and New

Winged beings that appear to be humanoid in shape, have been a part of the legend and lore of both ancient and contemporary cultures. In Western Christendom, heavenly Messengers believed to be angels have been the subject of religious art and belief for centuries. But what of those winged beings that are monstrous and decidedly non-angelic?

Going as far back to the ancient cultures of Babylon, Sumer and Mesopotamia monstrous human beings with wings played an important role in their mythology. The Anzu and Apkallu, were winged beings considered to be monstrous, as well as godlike.

Ancient Japan has tales of the Tengu, a yokai that was a giant winged humanoid with razor sharp talons. Forests and mountains were avoided by the Japanese, as they believed these terrible creatures dwelled in their cliffs. These representations are great, but what of more contemporary sightings of winged Humanoids? Two come to mind.

Winged Woman of Vietnam

In August 1969, a platoon of American soldiers in Vietnam reportedly came into contact with a winged creature that resembled a woman. They described the entity as having the shape of a woman with long stringy hair that flowed over two great bat-like wings. They further described the entity as giving off a sickly green glow and a sense of doom. Whatever this creature was appeared to be merely curious of the soldiers and nothing more.

The Point Pleasant Mothman

Perhaps the most famous flying humanoid was the creature called, Mothman. For over a year, Mothman terrified the town of Point Pleasant, West Virginia starting in 1966.

The sightings and encounters with the Mothman coincided with multiple sightings of strange lights and aircraft in the skies above the town. The sightings came to an end when the Silver Bridge linking West Virginia to Ohio, collapsed killing 46 people. Some believe the Mothman either caused the collapse or was an omen of the tragedy.

The Mothman Cometh. Again

Since the sightings of the Mothman in the 1960s, whatever it was either went dormant or back to its home planet. That is until recently. As if the Windy City didn't have enough strange activity and ghostly phenomena, a creature similar to Mothman has been seen flying over the city. And just like Mothman and the winged woman, this creature is the stuff of nightmares.

Sightings of the Chicago Mothman began in 2011. People in the city reported a bizarre bat-winged being with the body of a human with red glowing eyes filled with malevolence. So far, there have been 55 reported sightings of the Chicago Mothman, with many more that have probably gone unreported by people afraid of being called insane. We are going to explore a handful of the more dramatic encounters.

Terror In The Mirror.

The first known close encounter with the Chicago Mothman happened in late September of 2011. Two roommates in a five story apartment had the first of many encounters. One of the women was waiting in the living room as her friend continued getting ready for a night out. Suddenly, the woman in the living room was startled when her friend let out an ear piercing shriek. The world was about to take a very weird turn for these two women.

When she rushed into the bedroom, she found her friend crying and shaking with absolute fear. After a few minutes of consoling her, her friend told her what scared her.

While she was getting dressed, she turned towards the mirror and saw a giant black shadow with wings and eyes that glowed an unearthly orange, hovering outside their 3rd floor apartment. When she screamed it must have startled the beast because it flew away.

Campus Ghoul

A month later in October, 4-5 people in a park near the University of Illinois at Chicago, reported a man with wings hovering 10-15 feet over their heads. The bizarre entity flew away a few moments after being seen. The eyewitnesses described it as being 6-8 feet tall with large black wings and eyes that burned a brilliant red.

Lake Michigan Sighting

Whatever the creature is, it appears to be attracted to water as it was seen several times flying over Lake Michigan.

On a nice quiet evening in April 2017, a group of friends were enjoying a night sail on the lake when the unexpected occurred. Their attention was drawn to a human shaped being hovering over their boat. The thing seemed to be watching them. One of the people on the boat said it hovered silently, held aloft by giant black wings and it's eyes glowed a dark amber. The same woman further claimed she saw a UFO a few days prior to seeing the creature.

Lechuza

Chicago has a large Mexican American population that brought their rich cultural heritage and legends to Chicago. One night, a Mexican family was outside their building when they saw a giant creature fly overhead.

One of the eyewitnesses, said the entity reminded him of a fearsome creature from Mexican folklore called, Lechuza, a giant bird that ate people. When the children began to scream and cry, the winged entity flew off in the direction of North Avenue and vanished.

As 2017 came to a close reports of seeing the unusual flying entity became less and less. There was an occasional report but they turned out to be unsubstantiated. Nevertheless, there has been a recent encounter at Chicago's O'Hare airport that terrified an airport employee. Many fear with this recent sighting the nightmare may be making a comeback.

On the night of November 26, 2019 a truck driver was picking up a load of cargo when he caught a glimpse of something that should not exist in our world.

Later when he spoke to researchers, he said that an unusually tall person, 8-10 feet, was standing outside the fenced in area. He watched as the entity spread out it's long arms and furiously flapped the black, bat-like wings that hung from it's arms.

He watched as it turned and vanished into the night. The man called the entity a demon, because it's eyes glowed with the fires of hell and it gave off a feeling of evil.

Something strange is still seen flying over the tall buildings of Chicago and the nearby suburbs. We, of course, are left with the burning question, what did these credible people see?

Skeptics have suggested the people who saw this entity were seeing a Sandhill Crane and not some winged nightmare. However, if you're from the Midwest, there is no mistaking a Sandhill Crane as they are everywhere.

If it is the mysterious creature that haunted the people of Point Pleasant, let's hope we don't have a similar tragedy that killed 46 people

I just finished reading your book "The Red-Haired Giants, Atlantis in North America" and I loved it! The research you did and included in the book on the many, many ancient mounds is overwhelmingly convincing.

I am fascinated by the concept of such early origins stemming out from Wisconsin. I have to say, I am leaning in your direction with the findings based on credible research. Thank you so much for your work Mary and for making this information available to the public!

We are looking forward to more adventures in Burlington and beyond! We love you! Diana Palm

Edwin Charles Lowe wrote this about my book Revelations-Truths Revealed found at www.burlingtonnews.net/books-revelations.html

What is real or truth and how do you know what reality and truth are? Why do believe some truths about the nature of the universe and scoff at assertions that seem contrary to what you consider are the "truth"? For example, there are many people who believe that reported visits by angels and even God or gods in the ancient past were actually extraterrestrials, as do I, while most people are either dismissive or ridicule the very idea.

Mary Sutherland argues that modern man is caught up in the 3D view of reality focusing their reality based off their five senses. However – the true spectrum of reality encompasses both that which we can see and measure as well as that which we can neither see nor measure. Our human senses detect only about 5% of this spectrum, while the other 95%...although very real... is invisible to us. Our realities are based on the perception of the observer that come to us through our senses which are respondent to signals received and transmitted from the brain. Just like a computer, the brain needs to be programmed to accept and process data. From birth, our brain is programmed, both internally and externally, as to what to believe and how to respond to conditions based on those beliefs.

External programming comes via many ways, such as parents, teachers, religion, peers, books, television, etc. Similar to a computer, the brain filters incoming data, accepting what it has been programmed to accept and booting out the rest of the incoming data. The 'accepted' truths become your reality and all other information usually goes unconsidered or may even cause discomfort or even anger and worse yet holy wars, jihads, and World Wars!

The author indicates that one solution is to actively seek and consider different ideas, concepts, and even paradigms! Challenge your views and beliefs by actively seeking those of others. This does not mean to say reboot your brain, or discard all your personal truths, as if such a notion is possible. But it does mean you should read and study others truths!! Reading books like this and active consideration beats streaming on a bomb vest or grabbing your gun!!!!
